PRESS RELEASE

1 October 2013

Record sales for Allmet's Diamond Jubilee

2013 has been a successful year for Allmet. Not only have they celebrated their Diamond Jubilee but they have marked the occasion with a record number of large scale grain drier installations.

Allmet's Charles White said: "Despite the challenges of last year's poor harvest, farmers have continued to invest in their agri-businesses, turning to Allmet to help them future proof their farming enterprises."

James White continued: "This year the majority of our work has focused on larger farm and commercial grain drying plants. The priority here has been to increase capacity and efficiency with new intake systems, grain driers and conveying equipment. But equally important to us has been helping the family run farms modernise their facilities, with cost efficient grain drying systems."

Rising to the challenge the Allmet team completed all projects on time and in budget. The bespoke service Allmet offer means customers can opt for design, manufacture, installation and after-care all under one roof. The Allmet range of driers and equipment offer a quality system that is easy to operate, reliable and highly efficient.

Allmet would like to thank all customers past and present for their business over the past 60 years. They look forward to meeting growers at this year's UK Grain event to discuss how they can meet their storage, handling and drying needs, and to continuing to provide a first class service.
