

Storage is just the start

As the UK's largest wholly farmer owned central storage co operative, with four sites across central England and development underway in southern England with Wiltshire farmers, Camgrain is becoming widely recognised as the forward thinking farmers' choice for storage and added value marketing.

The Camgrain model is not a new concept, it has been developed and grown for over three decades to deliver the service and systems that are seen today. The investment into new technologies, marketing techniques and analytical reporting means that no one farmer, large or small, can match the facilities on offer. Farmers no longer have to see storage as a depreciating asset but a solid investment in their future.

One of the most recognised benefits of being part of the cooperative is exceptional service, a notion echoed by members. Camgrain deliver unmatched levels of service and attention to detail across the supply chain. This includes collection from members' farms within 24 hours, guaranteed, to ensuring that the food grade wheat and barley which enters the mill or maltings are in spec, and, on time every time.

The relationship between Camgrain farmers and the food industry has gone from strength to strength with Camgrain accredited to BRC (British Retail Consortium) Grade A. Millers, maltsters, supermarkets and breakfast cereal manufacturers all have closed loop supplies with Camgrain farmers, via the industry's leading infrastructure which its four sites have in place. This helps to ensure Camgrain provenance and guarantees quality, year on year as well as allowing members to cut at high moisture in difficult harvesting conditions.

By working together through the Camgrain co-operative, farmers gain economies of scale and marketing professionalism unachievable on an individual basis. Storage is just the start.
